

Waurnvale Interiors

A way to see colours, proportions and complete rooms before turning individually nice pieces into an expensive argument.

6 ROOMS

4 DIRECTIONS

96 STUDIES

THE SAME ROOM, THREE DIRECTIONS

Colour became something I could react to.

Instead of imagining materials one by one, I could move between complete rooms and notice what kept pulling me back.

Modern Indian

Japandi

Garden House

Modern Indian

Craft, pattern and deep green accents gave the room energy without asking every object to become the interesting one.

Japandi

A quieter palette shifted the same room towards texture, light wood and fewer visual interruptions.

Garden House

Stripes, cane, planting and darker joinery made the room warmer and more botanical without changing the shell.

The project gave me a vocabulary before it gave me a shopping list.

The concepts were not construction drawings. They were quick, concrete reactions: enough to learn which combinations felt right, which felt too coordinated, and which purchases were better left in the shop.

01

Visualise

Put a rug, sofa, colour and light into one room rather than four separate decisions.

02

Compare

Move between directions quickly enough for recurring preferences to become obvious.

03

De-risk

Rule out expensive combinations before buying, then verify dimensions and materials in person.